Female Falun Gong practitioners have been stripped, body searched, and beaten with electric batons in public. They have had their breasts punctured with iron wire. Eggplants, toothbrushes, water bottles, and hot pepper powder have been forced into their vaginas, in addition to electric batons. The police also torture practitioners' children and force pregnant practitioners to have abortions. They try to destroy them mentally and spiritually.

A female practitioner who was released from Masanjia Forced-Labor Camp said, "You can't imagine the extent of evilness there." More stunningly, after the crimes perpetrated in Masanjia were exposed, and it was made known that 18 female practitioners were stripped and thrown into male criminals' cells to be gang raped, the perpetrators were awarded and promoted by the Jiang regime. The regime rewarded the camp director with 50,000 Yuan [about US$6,250; $50 is the average monthly urban income in China] and the deputy director with 30,000 Yuan [about US$3,750]. Authorities also allocated money and ordered the jail to be expanded.

Police dare to beat and rape female practitioners in the streets

On May 14, 2001, a female practitioner was alone and posting Falun Gong flyers along the street from Dabeyiao to the Yong'anli city canal. A plain-clothes policeman on patrol stopped her. He viciously groped her, using the excuse of conducting a body search. She didn't comply. She struggled to get free and ran down the street. He chased after her on his bicycle, and beat her fiercely with a baton. She did not hit back but told him, "Falun Gong teaches people to treasure virtue and be kind. We are not bad people...."

He beat her to the ground and she could not get up. Two teeth fell out and her head was wounded. Her whole body was bruised and swollen. When he hit her fiercely with his baton on her right ear and temple, she lost consciousness. Then he dragged her under the bridge and raped her.
