

Western Falun Gong Practitioners Appeal on Tiananmen Square

On November 20th, 2001, 36 practitioners from 12 countries displayed a banner to peacefully appeal for Falun Gong.

Left: On January 23, 2002, Connie Chipkar, 61, went to China alone to appeal for Falun Gong. She stood on the Square and sang a song, "Falun Dafa is Good," so all could hear. (AP)

Right: Levi Browde and Jason Loftus unfurling a banner, which read: "The Self-Immolation is a Hoax; Falun Gong is Good" (AP)

"Falun Dafa came from your land of China and your beautiful and ever-so-rich culture. Without it, I would not be who I am today. With the deepest respect, I have come to your country to stand up for the truth for you. I hope with my white face and pure heart I can awaken the goodness in your heart. Please don't follow the president and his criminals to persecute Falun Gong—it is not good for you..."
— Zenon Dolnyckyj

"This clearly shows that Falun Gong is not a 'Chinese issue' alone—it is a world issue and the rest of the world disagrees with the brutal persecution and slander against Falun Gong by Jiang Zemin." ... "Jiang has been trying to hide his crimes under the guise of 'internal affairs,' but this simply is not going to work. We will not stop our peaceful appeals until the persecution of Falun Gong is over."
